BTEA TO HOLD CONSTRUCTION SAFETY CONFERENCE ON NOVEMBER 22, 2011 IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, NY—September 15, 2011—The Building Trades Employers' Association (BTEA) is pleased to announce the 2011 Safety Conference and Tradeshow, Construction Safety: What You Need to Know. This breakthrough conference will take place on Tuesday, November 22, 2011 from 7:30 am to 2:00 pm at the Hilton New York Hotel.

The conference is attended annually by over 350 individuals representing general contractors, construction managers, specialty trade contractors, labor representatives, and material and supply companies from New York's construction industry.

The most respected names in building and development will offer valuable insights into the impact of safety regulations and their application in the construction industry. The panel discussions will span a wide range of topics; including the threshold of legal liabilities associated with construction safety, fire safety and training, and the ten-year vision for the future of the construction industry as it relates to safety. In addition, the New York City Department of Buildings and OSHA use this forum annually to present their latest accident and safety statistics related to the construction industry.

The conference will draw a variety of high-profile vendors who will exhibit at the conference to ensure maximum exposure for their products and services. This conference will afford all vendors the opportunity to promote their services to many of the top safety professionals and executives in New York City's construction industry.

For more information regarding the conference or sponsorship opportunities, please contact Carol Karlin at the BTEA at (212) 704-9745 or ckarlin@bteany.com.
